

1. How do I tell my child to respond to physical bullying? Conventional wisdom and experience leads me to say 'Do everything you can to avoid a fight, but there does come a time when you have to stand up for yourself and hit back to show the bully that you won't be a doormat for them.' This, however, seems to conflict the Scripture's instruction to love our enemies and turn the other cheek.
2. I have had discussions with a hippy friend of mine who says war is sinful because Christ calls us to "turn the other cheek." Aside from Old Testament events, is there such a thing as a "righteous war?"
3. When I discuss issues with my friends and cite the Bible as a reference my friends often say to me, "Well, that's your interpretation." How do I respond to that without feeling like I am just giving another opinion? It just seems like all the force gets taken out of the point I am trying to make.
4. When the Bible says we will be held accountable for our actions does that also include sins that we've already been forgiven for?
5. What is the role of psychology in the church today?
6. When the Bible says that we will be "in the world" but we are not supposed to be "of this world" how is that possible? How can I know where the one stops and the other begins?
